The city of Phoenix enhances the community’s cultural and economic development by supporting the production, presentation, exhibition, advancement and preservation of visual art, design, music, dance, theater, literature, science, zoology, botany, natural history and cultural history for the benefit of the public.
INTRODUCTION

Arts and culture enhance the quality of life in Phoenix and make our city more livable - As the city of Phoenix has grown, so too has the arts and cultural community. Today, more than 130 nonprofit organizations provide arts and cultural experiences for Phoenix residents and visitors. The range and diversity of organizations and activities is consistent with what one might expect from the 5th largest city in the United States, and includes a symphony orchestra, opera and ballet companies, producing and presenting theater and dance organizations, art and history museums, a science center, zoo, botanical garden, and festivals reflective of the city’s diverse population. The city’s active downtown artist community of galleries and arts spaces participates in a monthly First Friday Artwalk, which brings thousands of people to downtown Phoenix. Numerous city-owned facilities provide a range of venues for arts and cultural activity.

Arts and culture generate jobs and economic impact - Arts and cultural organizations and their patrons are an acknowledged economic driver, with a $361 million economic impact in Phoenix. Arts activity generates state and city tax revenue and contributes to job growth in support industries, such as restaurants, hotels and retail businesses.

A rich cultural climate attracts business - Arts and cultural activity is increasingly recognized for its importance to Phoenix’s competitive position in attracting creative industries that rely on a highly educated and creative workforce. These “Knowledge Workers” seek to live in cities with a rich arts and cultural environment and ongoing educational opportunities. A vibrant arts and cultural community will help Phoenix to realize a competitive edge in attracting and retaining knowledge workers and creative industries.

The city of Phoenix has a long history of supporting arts and culture – The Phoenix Office of Arts and Culture and the citizen’s advisory Phoenix Arts and Culture Commission were established in 1985 by the Phoenix City Council to advance the growth and development of the city’s arts and cultural community. In partnership with the Commission, the Office manages the city’s nationally recognized public art program, administers a grants program, supports arts education, conducts research, provides information and assistance to artists and cultural organizations, and oversees the city’s cultural planning efforts. The Office also works with several other city departments that manage or support city cultural facilities and programs. Collectively these efforts result in a broad range of artistic and cultural opportunities for Phoenix citizens.

A comprehensive arts and cultural plan is needed to direct the city’s efforts and resources in supporting arts and culture – While the Phoenix Office of Arts and Culture and the Arts and Culture Commission have operated under their own strategic plan, the city’s overall support of arts and cultural programs has evolved to the point that a new city arts and cultural plan is needed – one that will guide the development of all aspects of the city’s arts and cultural programs and services for the next five years.
PURPOSE

The purpose of the Arts and Cultural Plan is to create a comprehensive vision of the city’s support for arts and culture to be implemented over the next five years. The plan seeks to answer the question, “How can Phoenix’s city government best help the arts and cultural life of Phoenix to thrive?”

The Arts and Cultural Plan is the product of a process involving citizens, the arts and cultural community, various city departments, the Phoenix Office of Arts and Culture and the Phoenix Arts and Culture Commission.

The Arts and Cultural Plan assumes that the city will continue to implement its current arts and cultural programs. These programs are mentioned explicitly in the plan only when they relate directly to the goals, objectives or strategies.

While some of the objectives and strategies set forth in the plan are achievable with current city staff, volunteer and financial resources, new projects and programs that may result from initiatives in the plan will require additional resources. The plan includes a goal specifically related to the development of new funding sources.

The Arts and Cultural Plan is an evolving document that will be reviewed and updated periodically by the city to respond to changing needs, priorities and new opportunities. The objectives and strategies listed in the plan are offered as approaches to addressing each goal. Other opportunities may present themselves during the implementation of the plan.

Implementation and updating of the Cultural Plan will be overseen by the Office of Arts and Culture and Arts and Culture Commission in partnership with various city departments.

Desired outcomes and specific performance measures will be determined by the Arts and Culture Commission in conjunction with staff of the Office of Arts and Culture and other city departments as each strategy in the plan is undertaken. Desired outcomes, performance measures and actual accomplishments will be reported periodically to the City Council.
THE CITY’S SUPPORT OF ARTS AND CULTURE

The Phoenix Office of Arts and Culture was established in 1985 by the Phoenix City Council to advance the growth and development of the city’s arts and cultural community. The Office of Arts and Culture manages the city’s public art program, administers a grants program, supports arts education, conducts research, provides information and assistance to artists and cultural organizations, and oversees the city’s cultural planning efforts. The Office of Arts and Culture works with other city departments that manage cultural facilities and programs. Collectively, these efforts result in a broad range of artistic and cultural opportunities for Phoenix residents and visitors.

The Phoenix Arts and Culture Commission, a diverse group of citizen volunteers, is appointed by the Mayor and City Council to advise on the development of arts and culture in Phoenix. The Commission includes representatives from the cultural, business, and education communities and the general public. The Commission is supported by other citizens and arts professionals who serve on panels to review applications and make recommendations regarding grant awards and selection of artists for public art projects.

Through ongoing advocacy efforts and relationships with other agencies and organizations, the Phoenix Office of Arts and Culture and the Phoenix Arts and Culture Commission work together to increase awareness of the city’s rich cultural diversity, the role of the arts in enhancing education and addressing social issues, and the contributions of arts and culture to Phoenix’s economy and quality of life.
